

MERRILL LOOKS ON TWO-WAY HOP AS NOT UNUSUAL

Two Flyers Ready to Return
To the Routine of Air
Transport Flights

WILL ENTER RACE

Ask Only for Rest; Most of Flying Was Done by Means of Instruments

NEW YORK, May 15.—(INS)—Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, their gallant two-way trans-Atlantic "coronation flight" now another chapter in the history of American conquest of the air, prepared today to return to their comparatively "humdrum" jobs, the routine of air transport between New York and Miami, Fla.

Merrill, still a little red-eyed after 24 hours and 29 minutes at the controls of the "Daily Express," modestly characterized the two-way ocean hop as "all in the day's work" and added: "There was nothing unusual about this flight except that we had to do a lot of instrument and blind flying. We probably did more instrument flying than has ever been done before. We were in the clouds all the way over and back."

Then he added with a grin: "Give us a few hours' rest and we'll be ready to get back to our jobs."

Lambie, drawing handsome youth who acted as co-pilot on the flight to London and return, declared:

"We never had an uneasy moment. We had a good plane and everything worked perfectly. We had more sandwiches than we could eat and plenty of conversation—mostly about when we should sight land."

Edward Woodington Dies In Hospital at Bath, N. Y.

Edward Woodington, 513 Pond street, died in the Veterans' Hospital, Bath, N. Y., yesterday, having been a patient in that institution for the past three weeks.

The deceased was the son of Ellen Keen Woodington and the late William Woodington. He was 58 years of age. The body has been brought to Bristol, the funeral arrangements being in charge of the H. S. Rue Estate, funeral directors.

Cop Credited With Saving Woman's Life

DOYLESTOWN, May 15.—What Constable Rodgers, of Newtown, learned about first aid at one of the sessions of the Bucks County Police and Constables' Training School held twice a week in the Court House, here, saved the life of a woman it was learned at a class held Thursday evening.

Dr. Raymond D. Tice, Quakertown physician, who is delivering a series of first aid lectures, emphasized the importance of applying tourniquets at the proper places a short time ago. When it came time for Constable Rodgers to apply a tourniquet on the arm of a woman who was suffering from a cut in the radial artery after her hand plunged through a window pane, he followed Dr. Tice's instructions.

Taking her to the office of a physician, the constable was praised for putting the tourniquet at the proper place, and told that it undoubtedly saved the life of the woman.

With an attendance of about 40 minor law enforcement officers, Dr. Tice explained various phases of first aid, including first aid in the home with reference what to do and what not to do in emergencies of appendicitis, stomach ache, fainting and unconsciousness.

Speaking of convulsions, an emergency which arises often, the physician stated that nothing can be done other than keeping the patient from hurting or injuring himself.

Colds were described as infectious diseases, and are always obtained by direct contact. Many colds could be avoided if people were more careful about covering their mouths when coughing or protecting their noses when sneezing.

In the case of an appendicitis emergency, never administer a physic, or for that matter in disturbance such as common stomach ache, the physician stated.

Next Tuesday evening Sergeant James Kelly, of the Philadelphia Detective Bureau, well-known to local and State Police here because of his investigation of the recent post office safe robbery and others in Bucks county, will be the speaker.

Sergeant Kelly, one of the finest investigators on safe robberies in the police world cleared up the recent safe finding at Castle Valley.

INVESTIGATE "BOMB"

The "bomb" reported dropped from an airplane on the King farm at Penn's Manor so far as the authorities have been able to learn, was nothing more than "some sort of radio set used for experimental purposes." State Trooper Gowan, Doylestown, and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo investigated the affair yesterday.

Perkasie To Continue Its Fight Against Sewer Rates

PERKASIE, May 15.—In spite of the fact that Sellersville has dropped its side of the fight, Perkasie Borough Council has agreed to push its drive against the increased rates announced by the Perkasie Sewer Company.

This was decided at a special meeting called for the purpose, when councilmen conferred with Lantz Brothers, Wilkes-Barre engineers retained to conduct the technical investigation for the borough.

The firm promised that it would carry on the fight under a guarantee of only the savings of one year for its fee. If the Lantz Brothers fail to effect a reduction in the proposed increase they will ask no remuneration beyond the $500 already expended in the work.

TO DISCONTINUE THE Q. & D. RAILROAD

Interstate Commerce Commission Examiner Recommends
That It Be Abandoned

ONLY 13 MILES LONG

QUAKERTOWN, May 15.—It has been recommended by an examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission that the 13 miles of rail line from here to Durham be abandoned. It is stated that the line is unprofitable to operate and therefore a burden for its present owner, John Buckland, Allentown.

The railroad is known by different titles, Quakertown and Easton, Quakertown and Bethlehem, Quakertown and Durham and Quakertown and Eastern. It was laid down about 40 years ago by a group of stockholders throughout this area by investors in the Quakertown, Richlandtown, Pleasant Valley and Springfield sections. A number of years ago the property, its lines, bridges, locomotives, freight cars and other equipment was disposed of to Mr. Buckland, who had acquired the Durham slag deposits and mines from which iron ore was dug years ago. He crushed the stone and slag found here and shipped it over his line to Quakertown for delivery to customers who bought the product for road building material.

The road is a single track and standard gauge so that trains could be switched on to the main tracks of the Reading lines that run between Philadelphia and Bethlehem. The road was put down in the hey-day of railroad construction and thought at one time to be backed also by another powerful railroad company in the East who sought an outlet in this area from the Atlantic seaboard to the West and was to connect Philadelphia with Easton.

However, it never materialized and in fact that line stopped at the end of Durham near the Delaware River and the famous Durham cave. It was used at first for the transportation of ore from the Durham mines and iron when these mines were in operation. Today the kilns are falling down and ivy and bushes are slowly covering this once busy iron center.

At that time the railroad enjoyed considerable passenger patronage too. It was a quick trip to the Delaware and Riegelstown, only a mile above and with towns of Richlandtown, Pullen, Pleasant Valley, Springtown and Durham.

At the present time two locomotives are owned by the railroad, several cars and a gasoline engine used at the crusher.

HULMEVILLE

Virginia Mather, two weeks old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Mather, Maple Shade, Bristol Township, died at the Wagner private hospital, Bristol, yesterday morning. The funeral will occur this afternoon, with burial at two o'clock in Friends Burying Ground, Langhorne. The baby was the daughter of Vincent and Grace Thorpe Mather, formerly of this borough. The twin sister died when two days old.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell W. Brown enjoyed a recent trip to Kentucky.

TULLYTOWN

Mr. and Mrs. William Kuhn announce the birth of a daughter on Monday in Dr. Wagner's hospital.

Mrs. Mabel Cray, Mrs. Elwood Walters, Sr., Mrs. Frank Carlen, and Mrs. George Hitchcock and son George, spent Monday visiting at Spring Lake.

Wayne Stake has purchased the home on Fallsington avenue from William Hunter, Fallsington.

Earl Pope, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Pope, is confined to his home with scarlet fever.

Mrs. Helen Johnson, Trenton, spent Tuesday visiting relatives here.

Mrs. John Chase was a visitor at the home of her mother, Mrs. Albert Abrams, Elgely, Wednesday.

Mrs. John Burton, Jr., has been confined to her home with illness.

Members of the eighth grade of the Tullytown public schools, took their final county examination in the grammar room, Friday. The class is composed of Sonia Johnson, Ruth Bachofer, Mae Etta Headley, Pauline Heller, Rose Lussellmann, Dorothy Polak, Lettie Termyna, Jack Hebel and Louis Esterline.

Mrs. Christopher A. Johnson and daughter Christine spent Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Bowman, Glenolden.

THE END OF A HISTORY-MAKING FLIGHT

At top, Dick Merrill's staunch Lockheed Electra is pictured as her wheels touched the runway of Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., on the completion of his epoch-making round-trip flight. He took pictures of the Hindenburg disaster to London, and returned to New York with pictures of the Coronation. It was the first round-trip commercial transatlantic flight. Below, Merrill (center) and his co-pilot Jack Lambie, are being escorted through the crowd that jammed the Bennett airport.

CIVIC CLUB OF YARDLEY GIVES A PROGRAM HERE

Presents "Morning of Quips and Quirks" for Enjoyment of Travel Club Members

FOLLOWED BY A TEA

In delightful manner members of Yardley Civic Club entertained women affiliated with the Travel Club, in the latter's home, Cedar street, yesterday afternoon.

On the occasion of this reciprocity program, an original sketch, written by Mrs. S. S. Hartman, president-elect of the Civic Club, vocal solos; and a paper "Highlights of Pennsylvania History" by Mrs. R. M. Barbour, were the numbers so ably presented.

The "real life" sketch, written by Mrs. Hartman, and staged by 14 Civic Club members, was entitled "A Morning of Quips and Quirks," and the setting was that of a small-town post-office where residents call for their mail. Mrs. Hartman, having served in capacity of postmistress at just such an office, was well qualified to write the humorous piece. She impersonated the postmistress, and the trials that beset one in charge of such a place of business, as well as the humorous situations that arise daily, elicited much applause. At the conclusion of the tea-meeting the authoress and the players were highly congratulated for their fine work.

The chairman of the Civic Club dramatic committee, Mrs. Alfred Ericco, announced the number, and participated in the sketch, as did also the following: Mrs. S. S. Hartman, postmistress; Mrs. Robert S. Johnston, assistant postmistress; Mrs. Robert M. Barbour, a young boy; Mrs. Marion Brindley, Uncle Josh; Mrs. Mary Y. Beans, a traveler; Mrs. Norman Tallman, Miss Elizabeth S. Weeks, Mrs. Vaughn S. Grundy, Mrs. Walter H. Thompson, Mrs. Harvey J. Funk, Mrs. Harry Magill, Jr., Mrs. James E. Groome, Mrs. Charles F. Cook, patrons of the post-office.

Scenery used included a post-office window, and rows of mail boxes.

The afternoon program was in charge of Mrs. George LaRue, who introduced Mrs. Harvey Funk, president of the visiting club. The vocal numbers were given by Miss Lillian VanArtsdalen, these including: "On Wings of Songs" (Mendelssohn), "Homings" (deRiego); and "Thank God for a Garden" (deRiego). The pianist was Mrs. William Howett.

In her paper "Highlights of Pennsylvania History," Mrs. Barbour told of the early settlers of the state and of the founding of the various towns and cities by different groups, with the state appearing as a huge patchwork quilt with different nationalities represented in the various sections or "patches." Tributes were paid to Benjamin Franklin, Betsy Ross, and others who were connected with the early history of the state and nation. Philadelphia, the cradle of American liberty, was mentioned for its historic buildings, and mention was made that this keystone state had the first volunteer fire company, the first chartered hospital, first labor union, and many other "firsts." That the state produces everything from pins to bridges was well brought out.

Recover Tighe's Body

Philadelphia, May 15.—The body of seven year old John S. Tighe, missing since Sunday, was recovered by police today from the Schuylkill River near Gray's Ferry. Recovery ended five days' frantic grappling by harbor patrolmen.

Meanwhile, James Brady, 9, who informed police Monday he pushed the Tighe boy into the river "because he was a sissy," indicated he was tired of staying in the House of Detention. "I want to get out of this place," he said.

Attempt to Assassinate Franco

(Copyright, 1937, by I. N. S.)
London, May 15.—An attempt has been made on the life of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, leader of the Spanish rebellion, according to reliable information received in diplomatic quarters here today.

Strong censorship has been imposed to prevent leakage of information. It was not known definitely whether Franco was wounded but it was generally believed he had escaped injury.

Viscount Snowden Dies

London, May 15.—Viscount Snowden of Ickneshaw, who became Britain's first Laborite chancellor of the Exchequer in 1924, died suddenly today of a heart attack.

Snowden, who was 73, was known to his political friends and opponents alike, as a "trail invalid of mighty spirits"—a designation he lived up to by conquering ill health and humble origin to the high office as a British peer.

MISS EFFIE WATSON TO RETIRE; TAUGHT 50 YEARS

Has Busy Period Ahead If Her
Plans and Desires Work
Out Well

TEACHES HERE 35 YEARS

If plans of Miss Effie H. Watson for activities during her leisure time, following retirement from the teaching profession at the end of this school term are fulfilled, she will be as busy as she has been during the 50 years she has taught boys and girls of Bucks County public schools.

"First I want to get some rest, and take things easy; then I expect to devote some of my time to some public work. I am particularly interested in the temperance cause. And I love to work among the flowers and grass, and at our home in Fallsington we can make use of someone who has time to do that." The fourth desire of Miss Watson is to travel, her particular desire being for automobile trips.

When her books are closed for the final time as teacher next month, Miss Watson will have completed just a half century as a teacher. In that period she has seen many changes wrought, both in the method of instruction, in subjects taught, as well as in school buildings and equipment.

Of her desire for travel, Miss Watson voiced a wish to tour the New England states by automobile. "And I hope my travel wishes come true," she added.

Bucks County has always had a claim on Miss Watson as far as teaching is concerned, her instruction during the 50 years being entirely in schools in the lower part of the county. She started her work in Bristol Township, teaching for the first year at Newportville school building, having the primary grades in her care. The remaining four years of that period were spent in the Delaware School, located between Tullytown and Bristol (and since discontinued), and the Laurel Bend school. Then for a 10 year period this veteran instructor had charge of classes at "Wildman's Corner School" (later known as Maple Point School), in Middletown Township, and located between Woodbourne and Newtown.

Coming next to Bristol borough, Miss Watson spent the last 35 years in teaching children of Bristol residents. First at Wood street school building she taught the seventh grades; then was transferred to have charge of the primary department in Jefferson avenue building. Next she was called to Wood street, where she was made principal of the grades, later removing to the Harriman building where she as principal of grades had classes one to eight under her jurisdiction. In recent years she has been teaching literature and spelling in the eighth grades, while serving as grade principal.

Recalling the early days of teaching when she as well as other instructors were required to care for the school fires, Miss Watson informed that coal was used for fuel. "We all learned to take pretty good care of the fires, and I was able to 'bank' it so that it would remain from Friday afternoon until Monday morning."

Absentees were fewer in the earlier days, says Miss Watson. "The pupils didn't seem eager to miss school at that time," she said, adding that probably school presented the main means of social contact in those days. Spelling bees were much enjoyed, and many of them were conducted at that time.

Of the teachers' institutes this veteran teacher had this to say: "Institutes of 40 or 50 years ago were more methodical and practical; while those of more recent years were more entertaining and enthusiastic."

In her 50 years of teaching Miss Watson has made her home with families near her place of employment. Each Friday evening she returns to her residence in Fallsington, coming back to Bristol on Monday mornings. Trolleys, automobiles and buses have been used as means of transportation by this teacher during the past 50 years as she went to and from her school. "Years ago it usually required 1½ hours to travel by trolley from Bristol Township to Fallsington, taking different trolley lines. Now I reach home by automobile in 15 minutes."

Born near Fallsington, this daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Watson received her early public

AMBITION REALIZED

Jefferson Davis Tobias is 67 years old. This spring he will be graduated from the Campbell College High School for Negroes at Jackson, Mississippi.

A parent who kept him out of school, the later necessity of working for a living and still later of supporting a wife and ten children seemed destined to thwart his ambition, conceived at the age of three, of "learning to read a newspaper."

In 1929 his wife died. His children were grown. A white woman gave him a home in exchange for tending her garden. He resumed the schooling which had come in short snatches, entered high school and plugged for eight years toward a diploma.

Now 67, Tobias said: "I don't reckon I'll go to school any more, because I can read books and study by myself now."

And thus is ambition, persisted in over a long period, kept alive notwithstanding discouragements, patiently preserved and tenderly nursed, finally realized. Jefferson Davis Tobias can read. Furthermore, Jefferson Davis Tobias can and will study. Too bad he is already 67 years old. Age will limit his opportunities. But he still will stand as an example.

TO SET BEFORE A KING!

"The President," says a dispatch from New Orleans, "ate oysters Rockefeller and pompano."

Now there is no ordinance which says a gourmet visiting the French side of Canal Street shall not leave without a meal of these specialties, but laws of immemorial custom are stronger than any in the books. No one who fancies food, as distinguished from plain feeders, would dream of passing up grilled pompano and its invariable prelude, in New Orleans.

Oysters Rockefeller are a number of Gulf oysters on the half shell, laid in a bed of moist sea salt and sprinkled with fine herbs; then set beneath a flame until the fringed edge of the oyster curls delicately in the heat and begins to brown. The dish is then shoved under the nose of the gourmet, who is enveloped in a cloud of vapor combining the aroma of herbs with the tang of the sea and causing him instantly to drool.

A pompano is a relative of the mackerel, but flatter and more subtle in flavor, and it is split and grilled under another flame, while soufflé potatoes seethe in a nearby kettle. It is unnecessary to deal here with a captious criticism of the soufflé potato, voiced by Irvin Cobb, that he hesitated to eat it unless he knew who blew it up. It belongs with pompano and vice versa.

If Antoine has a bottle of Sauterne in the house and a loaf of French bread running largely to crust—which he does—a meal is provided that is fit for king or president. It was hardly necessary to say that Mr. Roosevelt availed himself of the chance.

Pola Negri or someone will have to describe the feeling of being made love to by a Caesar at the top of his voice.

In the last nine months of 1936 it is estimated, 18,578 gas wells were tapped in the United States. And opened their remarks with "Mister Chairman and fellow citizens."

Mrs. John J. Willaman, Travel Club president, was in charge of the business session, calling upon Mrs. Paul V. Forster for minutes of the last two meetings. Announcements made by the president included the executive meeting of the club to occur prior to the annual meeting on June 4th. A flower show will also occupy the attention of members on that day, with the arrangements being voted upon. The final card party of the year is to occur at Mrs. Willaman's residence on May 26th at two p. m., Miss Frances Landreth, chairman, telling of the arrangements. The members of the Junior Club will be entertained at tea between four and six on that day. The local club will benefit from tickets the members sell for the play "The Importance of Being Earnest" to be staged at Torresdale by Torresdale Dramatic Club on May 20th and 21st.

Mrs. Harry Neher presented for enlightenment of those assembled another of her interesting reviews of state and national legislation. The question of the annual trip of the members was presented by Mrs. Walter Pitzonka, the decision being to visit Longwood Gardens at Kennett Square on May 21st, leaving Bristol at 10 a. m.

Hostesses at the tea tables were: Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Mrs. George Irwin and Mrs. Carl Wenzel.

school instruction in Fallsington and Newtown, to which borough the family later moved. Miss Mary Eastburn, who taught at Newtown school many years ago, became interested in the young folks who desired to secure a higher education, and instructed them in geometry, Latin, and other subjects, in order to prepare them for teaching careers. Miss Watson was among this group.

"I was only 14 or 15 years old when I was first called upon to teach," commented Miss Watson, in looking back through the years. "I was attending Newtown grammar school, when the principal developed a case of mumps. The assistant principal filled the position of principal for the period, and I was asked to teach in the grammar grades for about two weeks."

Following completion of her work in the grammar school and instruction by Miss Eastburn, Miss Watson studied at Newtown Academy for a period of approximately six months. Since that time, during her teaching career, she has engaged in Summer courses of study at various colleges.

Pupils taught by Miss Watson during the last half century represent in many instances two generations.

DIVORCE AFTER 54 YEARS

WARREN, O.—(INS)—After 54 years of married life, Mrs. Ellen Wilhelm has filed suit for divorce in common pleas court here, charging her husband, J. C. Wilhelm, with extreme cruelty. She asked for an order restraining Wilhelm from encumbering $60,000 of an estate.

WILL TELLS JUDGE TO PLAY "SOLOMON"

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(INS)—Probate court judge John L. Gilson must play the role of modern Solomon as the result of an unusual will left by George H. Pfaff, local butcher.

Pfaff left to Judge Gilson the making of a decision as to whether Pfaff's wife left him without reason.

If Judge Gilson finds that she did have justifiable cause for leaving the Pfaff home, the butcher's wife will receive the income from one-third of her late husband's estate. However, if she did not, she will be cut off from sharing in the testator's estate.

HOWEVER

(By Arthur Reid)

President Roosevelt returns to Washington to face a Congress which is restive, moody and fearful of constituents. The national legislators, after more than four months in session, have, besides routine, produced little of consequence save a neutrally act of dubious efficacy and the rewritten Guffey coal bill. The fight over Mr. Roosevelt's Supreme Court packing scheme has impeded all other progress.

For the moment, prospects of the 15-man Supreme Court plan do not look so good. How much persuasion and pressure plus patronage can accomplish is the question. There is little doubt, though, that the lawmakers know the plan is unpopular and are themselves uncomfortable in consequence.

The President has another nut to crack in the question of economy. Congress is bridling against the plan for a tentative 15 per cent saving in appropriations, which leaves it to the President to cut or not to cut. Just as he sees fit; also about his request for a $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation. Flat slashes in appropriations would cut down the bill. Nothing is certain in such a sliding scale as Mr. Roosevelt contemplates. Every member of the House and one-third of the Senate must face the electorate next year. That will add to their jumpyness if a way out of all the conflicting problems is not found in a reasonable time.

The first test at the ballot box of the Roosevelt scheme to abolish the Independent Supreme Court turned out badly for the Washington Bureaucracy. In the Eighteenth Pennsylvania Congressional District a Republican, Simpson, running in a special election to fill a vacancy caused by death, made the President's Supreme Court scheme the issue of his campaign. His opponent pledged himself to be a 100-per cent Roosevelt "yesser" if he made it. The Republican won with a majority of 10,000 in a light vote.

A great majority of the people are today opposed to extension of the Roosevelt dynasty.

Owen Wister, famed author of The Virginian—perhaps the greatest novel of the West ever written—is now 77 and will not be compelled to spend his declining years in the hoosegow after all.

Wister and two "accomplices" arranged a meeting in Philadelphia to protest the raping of the Supreme Court. It seems they asked other citizens with "subversive" ideas like theirs to contribute to the expenses of the meeting. The speakers were U. S. Senators Gerry, McCarran, Copeland and Bailey—all Democrats.

At Harrisburg, where the State government is 100 per cent New Deal, a teletype message was flashed to the Philadelphia cops. Wister and his confederates were taken into custody. They had solicited funds without permission of the Harrisburg dictatorship.

The State Attorney General—Margiotti by name—says it was all a mistake and a misunderstanding. The Mayor of Philadelphia chimes in with his regrets. But the fact remains that Owen Wister, famed novelist and patriot, friend of Theodore Roosevelt, was arrested for arranging a meeting in the city of Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence was written and signed, to protest against as nefarious a scheme as has ever been seriously proposed in the history of the Republic.

MARY'S to be married in June

JUNE seems a long way off. But it's right around the corner when you consider all the things Mary must have by then. Linens . . . clothes . . . furniture . . . kitchen utensils . . . silverware. Goodness!

But Mary—and her Mother—are wise. They're going to cut shopping time in half. Already Mary has started to study advertisements in the newspaper. She's finding out who sells what—and for how much. She's making up her mind which are the most important items—and which can wait until after the wedding. She's learning brand names, new and old . . . following trends in furnishings and fashions. In short, Mary is developing a real knowledge of buying.

Learn to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Year-in, year-out, you'll find that they simplify your shopping . . . make your dollars go farther . . . give you better values and greater satisfaction with all your purchases.

ter—Tell those dopes to get along. . . . Let's get going, Sally."

Jonathan looked back to see the curious gathering, some dozens or so of them. He said:

"If you care to go across the street. . . . I'll attend to that cut . . . and . . ."

The girl was climbing out of the car. "And you can get me a taxi!" she said furiously, reaching the street.

The young man at the wheel stepped on the starter. He said, "See if I care," and wrenched the car from the curb and was off down the street. The onlookers gaped after him and one said loudly, "Phil Dexter, of course!" And a woman's voice said, "He ought to have his license revoked!"

"Come on," said Sally, "what are we waiting for?" She brushed the back of her hand across her forehead and looked with astonishment at the wet stain upon it. "It—hurts!" she said faintly.

Jonathan put his arm about her and supported her across the street and into the house. He switched on the lights, led her to his office and put her in a chair and a moment later held a glass to her lips. "Here, drink this," he said gently.

The pungent odor reached her and she jerked herself up. "I hate spirits of ammonia," she rebelled. "Drink it," said Jonathan.

She drank it and the colour came slowly back to her face. She was, he saw, even at this moment, exceedingly beautiful. A tall, slender girl, with fine features, and very black eyes, as an astonishing complement to her fair hair.

He busied himself with the cut, for the next few moments. It was shallow, and unimportant. She asked anxiously, "I won't be scarred . . . ? You won't have to take stitches?"

"No, indeed," he said cheerfully. "I won't have to take any stitches. You'll be right as rain in no time."

"Rain isn't always right—not at a horse race or on a picnic," retorted Sally. She looked at him directly, and her full red mouth curved. "So you're Doctor Kimber," she said.

Jonathan admitted it, cheerfully. Crossing the room to put away his things and wash his hands again he came back to her drying them, and smiled. "And now," he suggested, "suppose I drive you home."

A taxi, she reflected. . . . No, on the other hand. . . . "If you would, I'm sure my father and mother will want to thank you. . . . You've been very kind. . . . I'm not taking you away from your patients?"

"Well, hardly," said Jonathan laughing. "I don't often get them at this time of night."

"Unless they crack up against a lamp post," answered Sally.

While he was out of the room, going upstairs to tell Evelina that he was called away for a little while. . . . "Called away," sniffed Evelina. "I saw that girl and her boy friend smashed up against the post. Nice goings on for a respectable town. Too bad they didn't hit it harder!"

. . . Sally walked around the office. The adhesive drawing the edges of her small wound together gave her a rather rakish look, she decided, looking in a rather unflattering mirror. She opened her handbag, found powder and lipstick and applied them. She turned the great collar of her coat around her throat and shivered. She thought, he's really very good-looking. . . . a little on the sober side—but. . . .

Well, after Phil, to err on the side of sobriety had its good points, she decided, smiling at herself in the mirror.

Jonathan came back, looked in on her long enough to remark that he was going to get his car, and in a few minutes they drove away from the house. She said carelessly, "In case you didn't know it, I'm Sally

WORLD'S RECORDS DUE FOR A JOLT AT LANGHORNE

World's speed records are due to go by the boards at Langhorne's great mile speedway tomorrow afternoon when a half hundred drivers representing every hot bed of gasoline daredevilry in the country will clash in the inaugural event on the oiled course.

A six event program, climaxed by a 50 mile race, in which the innovations of speed engineers in modern racing juggernauts will be given a crucial test, has been scheduled by Hankinson Speedways and will be conducted under the banner of the contest board of the American Automobile Association.

High speed cars of every description, from the tiny flathead owned by Bill Drake of New Brunswick and to be driven by Johnny Duncan, to the monster aviation motored cars with super power entered by such notables as Ben Shaw, Gus Zarka, Roy Lake and Gordon Chard, will figure in the speed battles. Favored by thousands will be the Gus Strupp Miller in which the late Johnny Hannon and other stars scored nine victories at Langhorne during the last few years and which is to be driven Sunday by popular Vern Orenduff of Tallahassee.

So formidable is the huge Curtiss car owned by Ben Shaw that even Johnny Bagley, owner of the Cragar and McDowell cars to be driven by Tony Willman and Frank Beeder, conceded to be the strongest racing combination in the east, holds no hope of beating him in the time trials. In the long 50 mile grind, Bagley will concede him nothing, however.

Racing officials say that no Langhorne race has ever presented so many conjectures as the Sunday event. Even the many Jerseyites who pin their faith on Frankie Bailey, the little Eastern champion of last year, are dubious as to his chances against the formidable opposition he is to face.

The qualifying time trials are to start at 12:30 Sunday noon and the competitive events get underway at three o'clock, daylight saving time.

Entries for the races, as announced by Joe Dawson, zone supervisor for the AAA contest board, include:

Tony Willman, Milwaukee, Cragar; Frank Beeder, St. Louis, McDowell; Lyle Christie, Milwaukee, Miller; Ted Nyquist, Reading, Miller; Vern Orenduff, Tallahassee, Miller; Gus Zarka, Doylestown, Ambler-Hisso; Roy Lake, Los Angeles, Ambler-Hisso; Tommy Hinnershitz, Laureldale, Miller; Frankie Bailey, New Brunswick, Hal Spl.; Eddie Staneck, Clifton, N. At Hindenburg Blast Probe

Lieutenant Richard Andrews is shown before the Department of Commerce inquiry into the cause of the blast which wrecked the German dirigible, Hindenburg, at Lakehurst, N. J. Lieut. Andrews, in charge of the Naval Air Station ground crew, testified to seeing the rear port motor catch fire before the fatal explosion.

Deboyer on first; Chick Opgman on second; Jimmy Massilla, the hard-hitting shortstop, will play that position; Red Swope will play third; Harry Moller, formerly of Hufmeville, will play left; Danny Hines will act as captain and play centerfield and pitch; with Snyder in right and also in the box.

Manager Mulholland starts his 37th season on Saturday when his club plays in Philadelphia at Miller and Westmoreland streets, with the same club, Port Richmond.

Leedom's ground will gradually be put in shape, and in a few weeks, seats will be back on the grounds. So come out and root for a simon-pure local club.

Merrill Looks On Two-Way Hop As Not Unusual

Lambie looked fresh after the grueling flight, but he admitted:

"The first thing I thought of when I got out of the plane at Floyd Bennett Field was my bed in Newark."

Despite consistently bad weather on both legs of the journey, Merrill said there had been no real difficulty at any time. He related:

"We spent all our time at the controls. We didn't sleep at all."

"Every couple of hours we took turn about at the wheel and devoured a few ham and cheese sandwiches."

"We flew at 2,000 feet both ways to get out of the strong head winds. It was on account of those head winds that our return trip took slightly longer than my last western flight across the Atlantic. We had to throttle down the motor to conserve our fuel."

"All in all, however, we had a very good time."

Apparently remembering the stories of dissension between himself and Harry Richman on his last trans-oceanic hop, Merrill added, with a friendly grin at Lambie:

"We had complete confidence in each other."

Neither of the flyers had much to report on the Coronation. With a brief intermission for a tour of Westminster Abbey, they had spent all their time in England preparing the plane for the return trip.

"We didn't even have time to sleep while we were there," said Lambie. Merrill and Lambie looked forward

McFadden, as chairman. Plans were made for a rummage sale to be sponsored by the C. D. A., under supervision of Mrs. Margaret Murphy and her committee. Members were asked to save articles for the sale, and call the following members, Mrs. B. F. McGee, Beaver street; Miss Cecelia Kelly, Jefferson avenue; Mrs. Anna Gosline, Linden street or Mrs. Clara Snyder, Monroe street, at which time they will be called for. The May social will be conducted by Mrs. Bella Cullen, chairman, with women from the fifth ward.

Mrs. Moore will be sent as delegate, and Miss Julia McFadden as alternate, to the state convention in Reading, May 23 to 26th. The meeting adjourned after serving of refreshments. Attendance totalled 60.

BENSALEM VICTORS OVER LOWER MORELAND

The masterful pitching of Joe Cahill and the heavy hitting of the Owl batters gave the Bensalem nine a 16-0 victory over Lower Moreland on Wednesday.

Cahill pitched hard and well throughout the game. He fanned eight opposing batters, walked none, and issued only three scattered hits. Tom Adams led the batters and base runners by getting two hits out of two trips to the plate, and stealing six bases. Bensalem's constant lead gave Coach Reimer an opportunity to use the Blue and Gray extra and future material.
